

Public Announcement

This is a statement I am sending out to friends, family, past colleagues and acquaintances. I am asking this message to be forwarded on so that as many people as possible can be made aware of what I have to say.

For those that don't know me, my name is Chirag Patel. On the surface I may appear ordinary but there are a few in my life that know there is more to me than meets the eye. For most of my life I was blissfully ignorant of how different I was but over the past few years, certain things have been revealed to me. I am writing this message because you all need to be aware of what I have learned and what it is about me that makes me different. It is of extreme importance this knowledge be made public. You will, quite understandably, not believe what I am about to tell you but I can prove it, and my claims could be independently verified.

When I was young, I was selected for a special project. A project that had been running for several decades, run by western governments and a network of entities in the private sector. The aim of the project is to help people. Help them become better people, help them become successful in whatever they chose to do in life, so that they might go on to achieve greatness. It sounds like an amazing deal, most parents would jump at this rare opportunity to give their child the best chance, and many of them have.

The problem with the project is the form in which some of the help comes. Some of it, I have been grateful for. There are others aspects which would constitute crimes against humanity. I have reason to believe what has been done to me could be rolled out to a far large number of people in the near future. That is why I am asking you to heed what I say very carefully. Whilst the administrators of this project claim to be simply helping people, no sane person would ever choose to receive the help they are offering if they understood the full implications of what it meant. I never got to make that choice.

I will not go into all the ways I have been helped. Just the ways I need to be able to make my point:

- Over the years I have received blood transfusions to slow my ageing process. Those who know me will know I look about 10 years younger than I should. It is known to science that blood transfusions from a donor young enough will have an anti-ageing affect on the recipient. I mention this as its one the things that provides some visible evidence to my claims.
- When I was young, 5-8 years old I cannot be sure. I received a brain altering treatment which raised my intelligence in some ways but was detrimental in others. The easiest way to describe it was that it made me slightly autistic, giving me the symptoms of Asperger's Syndrome. Whilst I became an above average achiever academically, my quality of life suffered greatly in the same way as many other autistic people, finding it far harder to live in the present moment, make and maintain friendships etc

- This is the one which you will have the most trouble believing but I will state again, independent proof can be quickly obtained in the right facility. There is a spherical device which has been surgically implanted into my brain. The device is capable of reading my brain waves and transmitting them to a remote location. It has been demonstrated to me on several occasions that my brain waves have been analysed with such accuracy it was possible to determine exactly what was thinking, including words, pictures, sounds. The device is also capable of receiving commands and transmitting them into my nervous system, giving the controller the ability to affect my heart rate, cause my limbs to move involuntarily, affect my mood and emotional state. The device can be used to remotely kill me, via heart attack or stroke.

It is this last element which is of most concern. It is the element that I believe they plan to roll out on mass at some point in the near future. You may not think it possible but it is just a matter of technological progress before that danger becomes a reality.

I haven't really gone into who 'they' are. A difficult thing considering the great lengths which they go to, to hide their network and activities. You might know who I'm referring to. They consider themselves a higher power. They believe they have the right to play the role of god in our lives. I believe they will delude themselves into thinking they have the right to do this to everyone, they will tell themselves they are simply helping people, when in reality they would be plunging humanity into a dystopian nightmare. If it is not obvious why having this device is a bad thing let me make it plain. I have had my thoughts policed through this device, I have been 'punished' for the crime of thinking the wrong thing. I have been subjected to sleep deprivation through this device. If they find a way of mass deploying the device it could be used to commit mass murder, acts of genocide. It is a thing of evil.

That is the end of my initial statement. I have only written a small fraction of the information I plan to convey. In the coming weeks I will document much more and publish in this publicly accessible folder:

I am also going to seek out people who might be able to help me independently verify my claims. Please forward this message to as many people as you can. Hopefully somebody with the right facility will see it. I'm looking for scanning equipment that would reveal the existence of the implants in my body. I can be best contacted at chirag.patel29@pm.me

The last purpose of this message is that it serves as an insurance policy. If I am to die in the next few weeks, of a heart attack, stroke, street stabbing, car accident or meet any other 'unlucky' fate you will know why. They may try and stop me and if they manage to before I am able to provide full proof I hope that in itself will provide some credence to my claims. Thank you for reading.
